

FAMPATH Biomarkers Study

The FAMPATH study and the University of Pittsburgh are conducting research to learn more about biological markers in males and females, ages 25-60, who have a family history with a history of depression and suicide attempts.

Participants will be asked to complete two office visits and two scan visits.

Procedures will include interviews about mental health, neuro-cognitive and stress testing and MRI and PET scans of your brain.

Volunteers will be compensated up to $525.

To be eligible you must:

- Be between the ages of 25-60
- Have a parent, sibling, aunt, uncle or grandparent with a history of depression and suicide attempts
- Not be taking psychiatric medication
- Not have metal implants, dental braces, a pacemaker, or metal prostheses

For more details, and to see whether you qualify, please call the FAMPATH Biomarkers Research Team at 412-246-5628.